serving East Tennessee since 1930

J.T. Hannah, a prosperous businessman in the Great Smoky Mountains, operated the largest freight warehouse and stockyards in East Tennessee. Arriving daily at the warehouse were barrels of the finest local beers & whiskey, the widest variety of the freshest produce farmed in the southeast, as well as the best livestock - cattle, hogs and chickens. J.T. even had an exclusive contract to sort and distribute seafood and the finest Atlantic salmon in the territory.

Being the largest business this side of Knoxville meant that J.T. had the largest labor force around. These folks came from far, remote areas and worked long hard hours through the week. As was the custom back then, bunkhouses were put up to house the workers. Rising to the challenge to feed and entertain them, J.T. added a lunchroom just off the old icehouse building, hired the best cook in these parts, and began serving delicious, home cooked meals. He was also known to tap a barrel or two of his finest local brews.

Delivery men, railroad workers, folks coming to trade, and travelers looking for a place to rest, began to fill the seats in the lunchroom - which was now serving dinner too. Word spread quickly about the hearty fare and bounty of beverages available for such a reasonable cost at the old warehouse. Demand became so strong for the specialties coming from the kitchen of J.T.'s warehouse that he slowly closed down the storerooms and stockyards and opened his doors full-time to the public around 1930.

J.T. Hannah's Kitchen still provides the highest quality meats, pasta, and seafood around. Our vegetables and produce remain the freshest available and the best cook still oversees the preparation of each dish offered here at the warehouse. C'mon in, sit a spell, and enjoy the hospitality of J.T. Hannah's crew, just as they did way back when.
